DAILY GAZETTE.

THE BATTLE OF MURFREESBORO

A Graphic and Thrilling Account of the Battle of Murfreesboro, Dec. 31st, 1862.

The sun had not yet risen on Wednesday morning, when the firing commenced upon

The 1st Missouri battery, Capt. Hiescock, and the 1st Illinois battery, Capt. Hiescock, shelled the rebels out of a point of woods in front of Sheridan's division, which was slightly advanced.

The enemy threw himself upon Sheridan

with terrible energy, and was three times repulsed. Again he advanced with larger numbers and greater desperation than before, and Sheridan's men were compelled to give ground.

It was only a moment, however, the brave and noble 1st, assisted by other daring regiments, soon rallied the retreating troops. The battery of the stars and stripes once more advanced, and although it purchased the victory with its life, the rebels were repulsed and driven from this quarter of the field.

It was a few minutes after eight when this occurred, and at the same time the sun

broke through some cold-looking clouds, and flashed a clear, bright light over the fields. There had not elapsed even time enough to remove the body of General Sill,

when all attention was directed to the extreme right, where three divisions of the enemy—McQuinn's, Olinburn's and Cheatham's—had advanced in massive columns, and charged impetuously upon Johnson and Davis.

A portion of the infantry in Johnson's division immediately broke, almost, before they had taken their arms from the saddle, and one of the batteries, Edgerton's

(Ohio), was taken before it had fired the first round. Johnson was not at all but two of his guns.

A true, better, braver, younger man is seldom found than he. It was his great ambition to take part in a battle, and I remember how often and how earnestly he deplored that separation from the old third division, which preceded him from taking part in the battle at Perryville.

His hour came at last. It found him ready, but those upon whom he had a right to rely to give him timely notice of the enemy's arrival, failed to do so, and ere his guns could be loaded and discharged three times the rebel bayonets had swept his men, and he himself fell wounded and bleeding

into the hands of the foe.

The gallant and earnest Capt. Simon fought like a hero, as he is, and brought off all but two of his guns.

Capt. Goodspeed strenuously endeavored after firing several rounds, to save his cannon, but only succeeded in getting away with two of them.

Gen. Kirk, of Illinois, commanding one of the brigades in Johnson's division, was severely wounded while endeavoring to rally his regiments. The enemy succeeded in getting the right flank completely hemmed in.

A large number of officers of every grade were shot down while standing at the muzzles of rebel muskets. Brigades and regiments rushed upon one another in disorganized disorder, and the route of the disgraceful retreat was a rout.

I suppose I shall raise a storm about my head for saying so, but I can't from all that I have heard, come to any other conclusion than that the right wing of our army was completely surprised, and that too, under circumstances which should have rendered it particularly careful and vigilant. Whether

General Cook or General Johnson is to be blamed for this, an impartial investigation will hereafter determine. At present the sentiment of the army is extremely hostile

to both.

I imagine that it will not be many days before there are important changes in the leadership of the 14th army corps. The right of Davis' division which was assailed

at the same time as Johnson's, gave way simultaneously, and the route of the remainder seemed to follow as a matter of course.

It is left to Gen. Sheridan to stay the hitherto successful onset of the foe. Never did a man labor more faithfully than he to perform his task, and never was a leader seconded by more gallant soldiers.

His division formed a kind of pivot, upon which the broken right wing turned in its flight, and its perilous condition can easily be imagined, when the flight of Davis'

division left it without any protection from the triumphant enemy who now advanced upon its front and right flank, but it fought until one-fourth of its number lay bleeding and dying on the field, and all both remaining brigade commanders, Col. Roberts and

Gen. Sill, had met with the same fate as Gen. Sill.

Then it gave way, and in almost every instance of the kind, retreat was changed to rout, only less complete than that of the troops of Johnson and Davis. All these divisions were now hurled back together into the immense ravines of cedar thickets which shelter the turnpike and extend far over to Springfield Safe.

Our dispatches bring the agreeable intelligence that the enemy have been repulsed at Springfield, Missouri.

Successful Cavalry Expedition.

The dispatches of Saturday night, we hear, contain an account of a successful cavalry raid from Burnside's army to the White House on York river, capturing a large amount of supplies and destroying several vessels.

Disaster at Galveston.

Our naval forces at Galveston have met with repulse and disaster. The flag ship was blown up by a shot which entered the magazine, and the Harriet Lane, together with about 600 soldiers, were captured. The entrance to the harbor of Galveston is narrow, crooked and about fifteen miles long, surrounded by small sand islands. When the tide is out the smallest vessels of war would be left without sufficient water to float them.

Mr. Seward and Mr. Potter.

The Milwaukee Sentinel contains a letter from Mr. Seward to Gen. Rufus King, in relation to the statement that he wrote letters into the first district of this state counselling the defeat of Hon. John F. Potter. Mr. Seward denies that he has written any such letter within fifteen years past, in relation to any candidate, and absolves all his correspondents of all obligations of confidence, and gives his consent to the publication of every line he has written or spoken, during that period, in regard to candidates; campaigns or elections.

Another Stronghold on the Mississippi

The Washington correspondent of the Chicago Journal describes Port Hudson, on the Mississippi river, twelve miles above Baton Rouge, as much stronger than Vicksburg. The river makes a bend at Port Hudson, the batteries extend over three miles, and the guns, which are of the largest calibre, command the bluff for a much greater distance. The river is four hundred feet high, and the gunboats cannot elevate their pieces sufficiently to reach the fortifications. In the rear there is a swamp through which batteries cannot be moved, and must be crossed in some way before an attack can be made on Port Hudson.

The Battle of Murfreesboro.

We publish, to-day, the best description we have seen, of the great battle of Wednesday, Dec. 31st, before Murfreesboro. No one can read it without admiring the genius of the commanding general, who wrested a victory from the enemy in the midst of defeat. On the Friday succeeding the enemy attempted a similar coup de main on the left wing of our army, and succeeded partially, only to be met and again overthrown by a reserve under Gen. Negley, in the same way that they were defeated after the repulse of McCook. Honor to Rosecrans and his brave. They deserve to have their deeds published far and wide.

Desertions.

It is stated that the secretary of war is about to institute measures of greater severity against desertions from the army. This may be necessary, but if the men were treated better by their officers we think this evil would disappear, almost entirely. There are a vast number of ignorant, tyrannical and drunken officers in the service, against whose overbearing and insulting conduct the privates have no redress. Officers, high and low, seem to have combined, in many instances, to protect each other, and court martials for misconduct towards privates never amount to anything. The American volunteer is a man and must be treated as such, or demoralization will be the consequence. The secretary of war would do great service to the army if some means were taken to mete out prompt justice to officers who maltreat and oppress privates in the service.

The 33d Regiment.

We learn that this regiment was in camp five miles from Abbeville, Mississippi, on the 17th of December. This and the 32d belong to Gen. Grant's army.

ever expect to win until the day of judgment. I stood in the midst and upon the highest point of the mountain, and the space, being between the torrid and the railroad, fronted the key to our position. Let the rebels obtain possession of it, and of the immense train of wagons packed along the line, and the line of retreat would be cut off, and nothing could save it from utter ruin, slaughter and capture; and yet each minute it became more and more plainly evident that all the reinforcements which had been hurried into the woods to sustain and rally the broken right wing, and check the progress of the enemy in that direction, had proved inadequate to the task, and had in turn been overthrown by the great mass which was straggling, in inextricable disorder, through the woods.

Such sounds as proceeded from that gloomy forest of pines and cedars, were enough to appal with terror the stoutest hearts. The roar of the cannon, the crashing of shot through the trees, the whizzing and bursting of shells, the unintermitted rattle of 30,000 muskets all mingled in one prolonged and tremendous volume of sounds, as though all the thunders of Heaven had been rolled together, and each individual burst of cannon or volley had been rendered perpetual, and above it all could be heard the wild cheers of the traitorous hosts, as body after body of our troops gave way, and were pushed back towards the storm, louder and louder resounded the tumult of battle. The immense train of wagons parked along the roads suddenly seemed almost instinct with struggling life, and every species of army vehicle proceeded by frightened mules, and horses, rolled and rattled away past me, in an unceasing and increasing stream, until the whole scene was a mass of confusion, and the air was filled with the shouts and cries of the terrified teamsters urging their teams to the top of their speed, were now mingled with the billows of smoke which swayed and surged over the fields.

Everything now depends upon the regiments and batteries which the genius of Rosecrans had massed along the turnpike to receive the enemy when he should emerge from the woods in pursuit of our broken and flying columns. Suddenly the roar of the cannon, visible and crowded to the thousands, presenting every possible phase of wild and uncontrollable disorder, burst from the cedar thickets and rushed into the open space between them and the turnpike. Amongst them all, perhaps not half a dozen members of the same regiment could have been found together. Thick and fast, the bullets of the enemy fell amongst them, and scores of them were shot down, but still the number constantly increased, by reason of the fresh crowds which burst every moment from the thickets.

It was with the greatest difficulty that some of the regiments which had been massed together as a sort of forlorn hope, to withstand and if possible drive back the victorious cohorts of treason, could prevent their ranks from being crushed or broken by the mass of fugitives.

From my position upon the elevated ground, between the railroad and the turnpike, I could view the whole scene, and with an intensity of interest and tension of nerves, which I have no language to express, I watched for the result when the desperate soldiers of the rebellion should enter the open space.

A tempest of iron was whistling around my head, but for the first time since I began to participate in the transactions of this awful war, they whistled and burst unheeded. I make no pretensions to extraordinary physical courage.

He who says that amidst the horrors of a battle he experiences no feeling of awe and sometimes dread, is a falsifier, an idiot, or madman; but at this time I could not have retired, even had I been so inclined.

My feet were rooted to the spot, my gaze was fascinated and fixed in the quarter where I expected the enemy to appear, and had an earthquake rent the earth before me, I could not have moved from the spot until I knew from the testimony of my own eyesight whether or no the Union troops upon whom rested the last hope, were, like the rest, to be beaten and overthrown.

Every conceivable form of deadly missile whizzed and whirled and burst amidst the crowd, and terror and dismay reigned uncontrollable. The whole disordered mass rushed down as fast as possible towards the river, into which it plunged, pushing and struggling to the other side.

The countenance under the great cloud of smoke was somewhat similar to that in the woods. No one knows exactly what occurred. There was a shout, a charge, a rush of fire, a recoil, and then for a time disappeared.

For ten minutes, the thunder of battle burst forth from the cloud. When our battalions advanced, they found no rebels between the woods and turnpike, except the dead, dying and disabled. There were hundreds of these, and their blood soaked and reddened the ground.

Similar to the position of the Old Guard in their charge at Waterloo, there has probably not been an instance of so great a slaughter in so short a time as during this repulse of the rebel left at Murfreesboro; and it will hereafter be celebrated in history as much as the fiery combat which crushed forever the power and prospects of Napoleon.

The rebel left was now thoroughly repulsed, and our troops, emboldened by their success, pushed after them into the woods, driving them back in turn over a considerable portion of the ground which we at first occupied.

The roar of our artillery sounded farther and further off as the different batteries moved on slowly after the retreating foe, and hostile cannon balls no longer plowed up the earth around me.

But while the enemy was thus retreating from this portion of the field, his cavalry made a most important dash upon another part of our line. It will be recollected that when the great struggle on the turnpike was going on, the wagon and ammunition train had been hurried over the railroad towards Stone River. A part of them were collected in a low piece of ground upon our side of the stream, but a large number were driven across and placed together upon the higher ground beyond.

This presented an opportunity which the vigilant and enterprising enemy could by no means neglect. True, the wagon and ammunition train were not in the rear of a whole brigade, which was guarding those on either side, in point blank range of a dozen pieces of artillery which were near the river, but nothing daunted by this display of force, about 300 rebel horsemen came galloping around the bend of the river from the direction of the Lebanon Pike, cheered lustily as they approached and made a bold strike for our wagons.

Similar to the position of the Old Guard in their charge at Waterloo, there has probably not been an instance of so great a slaughter in so short a time as during this repulse of the rebel left at Murfreesboro; and it will hereafter be celebrated in history as much as the fiery combat which crushed forever the power and prospects of Napoleon.

Saturday Night's Report.

SPECIAL TO CHICAGO EVENING JOURNAL.—The legislature has adjourned till Monday. Gen. Oglesby made a thrilling speech at the great union meeting last night.

Gov. Yates has been nominated by acclamation in the republican caucus for Senator, as the representative man of the party.

CAIRO, Jan. 10.

I have just received from a private and reliable source the following information from Vicksburg:

Fighting has not yet resumed. Gen. McClernand has arrived and had taken command of the army, superseding Sherman. This announcement is received here by all as a most unhappy turn of events. I have seen no one who thinks McClernand is the man for the place, and to remove a General in the face of an enemy with a victory half won, must always be deplored.

Banks and Farragut are reported advancing from below.

Sherman's forces are said to be falling back. If so, the taking of Vicksburg may be indefinitely postponed.

To-Day's Report.

[Reported Exclusively for the Daily Gazette.]

MORNING DISPATCHES.

Headquarters of the Army of the Potomac, January 11th.

The Richmond Enquirer of the 10th has the following:

CHATTANOOGA, Jan. 9.—It is now ascertained that the enemy returned from his position on Saturday and Sunday morning; seven miles beyond Stuart's Creek. His cavalry returned after hearing of the withdrawal of our forces. Gen. Morgan has returned safe after destroying the Nashville railroad within four miles of Louisville. He also destroyed the Lexington and Covington railroad and paroled a large number of prisoners.

The Enquirer says, Gen. Magruder in his official dispatch concerning the capture of the Harriet Lane, says: I have taken 600 prisoners and a large quantity of valuable stores, arms, &c. The Harriet Lane is but little injured.

NASHVILLE, Jan. 11.

The rebel Gen. Forrest's advance was at Franklin last night, and his pickets extend three miles west of that place. He is collecting provisions and conscripts. Four bunks have arrived to-day.

CHATTANOOGA, Jan. 7.

The enemy has advanced his lines seven miles this side of Murfreesboro. He has been guilty of the most outrageous enormities, stealing private property, robbing of peaceable citizens and running off negroes.

New York, Jan. 12.

Washington special to the Times says: Desertions of late have become so numerous that the government has been obliged to adopt the most stringent measures to secure the return of delinquents. He has become convinced that the system adopted some time ago is entirely inadequate, and has decided to remove Mr. Draper and place the business in the hands of General Wool, who will have full power for its execution.

New York, Jan. 12.

The morning papers contain no additional news relative to the Galveston disaster. The Tribune's Washington correspondent telegraphs the following from Richmond paper, Jan. 8th:

Kingston, N. C., Jan. 8th.—The Passaic iron clad was towed into the harbor at Beaufort, North Carolina, disabled, having lost her turret and guns, and leaking so badly that her pumps were kept going constantly. The steamer which towed the Monitor has not been heard from. The conservation at the loss of these vessels is great.

The Herald has the following: St. Louis, Jan. 11.—A force of rebel cavalry, supposed to be Hampton's command, has been hovering on our right flank for some days. Our cavalry pickets at Stafford's store were fired upon and two men killed. Our scouts have been fired upon repeatedly, and one man died to-day from his wounds.

Presuming that this cavalry was supported by a large force, Col. Fenry went out night before last with a force of cavalry, infantry and artillery, advancing by different routes. He reached Cathey's station, yesterday, where he encountered a drove of from 50 to 70 rebel cavalry. He ascertained satisfactorily that there is no rebel force, except roving bands of cavalry, on this side of the Rappahannock. He marched his cavalry 80 and his infantry about 60 miles, returning last evening. It was reported that the rebels had been running cars on the railroad to Manassas Junction, but this is doubtless incorrect. A sergeant of the 12th Illinois, captured by the rebels, managed to escape and reports the rebel force consisted only of cavalry belonging to Hampton's command. Gen. Sigel arrived here from Washington last evening.

AFTERNOON DISPATCHES.

St. Louis, Jan. 12.

Last night Gen. Curtis received dispatches from Col. Crab, commanding at Springfield, Mo., that the rebels were repulsed at every advance, and our forces held the place. We lost 17 killed; wounded not ascertained. We buried 35 rebels; more were taken off the field. They left a number of wounded in our hands. But little of Springfield was damaged. The rebels entirely destroyed the telegraph between Springfield and Land Spring. Curtis has three columns of troops after the enemy.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 12.

The New Ironides went to sea yesterday from Old Point.

New York, Jan. 12.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.

House.—Mr. White, of Indiana, offered a resolution instructing the committee on military affairs to inquire into the expediency of providing for the payment of company and regimental officers from the date of their commissions. Agreed to.

Mr. Colfax offered a resolution that the committee on ways and means be discharged from further consideration of the bill reducing the duty on imported paper from 35 to 10 per cent, and that the same be considered in the House now. Laid on the table.

On motion of Mr. Dunn, the secretary of the treasury was requested to inform the house of the amount expended since the rebellion in the employment of slaves in disloyal states, and to what extent these expenses have been repaid by services.

Mr. Noell offered a resolution that the committee on naval affairs enquire into the expediency of establishing a navy yard at a point near St. Louis. Agreed to.

Mr. Wilson, of Iowa, introduced a joint resolution that the President's proclamation is hereby ratified, approved, and confirmed.

Mr. Cox moved to lay the motion on the table. Disagreed to, 50 against 85. The resolution was referred to the committee on judiciary.

SENATE.—A number of petitions were presented in favor of a bankrupt act. Mr. Harlan offered a resolution requesting the President to inform the Senate what measures have been adopted to enforce provisions in the act to suppress insurrection and confiscate the property of rebels, and if any additional legislation is necessary. Adopted.

Mr. Clark offered a resolution requesting the committee on the conduct of the war to inquire and report what are the objections and causes of delay in the execution of the act to confiscate the property of rebels, and especially in the District of Columbia. Adopted.

Mr. Fessenden called up the bill to provide for the further issue of bonds and U. S. notes.

Mr. Carter was received from the secretary of the treasury in favor of this measure, explaining that the resolution from the house would not meet the wants of the government. Bill passed.

Mr. Fessenden explained that this bill made ample provision for the prompt payment of soldiers.

SOUTH CAROLINA ARIOTOCRACY.

Parnon Branch said in a late speech discussing the absurd pretensions of the cotton aristocracy:

"I have lived in South Carolina. I have traveled extensively in South Carolina for a number of years. Why, in their legislative assemblies, the sergeant at arms and a deputy or two, with cocked hats and swords, retire and bring in the speaker of the house, or speaker of the senate, who comes robed in black silk, to outdress in all the ample folds of his robe any two ladies here, even in times of the most extravagant hoops. [Laughter.] The sheriff accompanying them with cocked hat and sword, gives three raps upon the floor and cries, 'make way for your speaker!' [Laughter.] Then he marches grandly in and takes his seat. The same pompous forms are observed with one of their circuit judges. He is conducted in, in the same way. I have seen old Judge Butler, afterwards Senator, march with his silk robe on, preceded by his sheriff, and his deputies in cocked hats and with swords, crying, 'make way for the honorable court,' and everybody aquated like so many quails when a hawk is about. [Laughter.]"

DINNER TO GEN. BUTLER.—Gen. Butler is to be tendered a public dinner by citizens of New York.

EFFECTS OF EMANCIPATION.—The day after the emancipation proclamation was received in New York, Missouri stocks advanced from 10 to 14 per cent.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company

OF THE

STATE OF WISCONSIN

Presents advantages in all respects equal, and in some superior, to those of other companies doing business in the northwest. Its rates, its plan of operations, and its basis, are identical with the best companies in this country and Europe. Its age, and consequently its accumulations, are not equal to theirs in amount, but in proportion to the age of risks, and amount at risk, they will compare favorably with the most successful.

Its assets, which have resulted solely from their accumulations amount to $115,712.85, and its annual income, from policies now in force, over $85,000.

Its assets and business are constantly increasing. Its losses have been promptly paid. Its trustees are well known, honorable business men, and are as capable of managing an institution of this kind, as men in any other portion of the United States. The experience of the company thus far proves that we can have as reliable companies in the west as any where else; if we will, and self-interest certainly indicates that we should have them, and build up home interests in every practicable way. In the above respects, this company claims equality with its co-workers, and in the following superiority: It obtains the greater portion of its business in the healthiest portion of the United States, thus having the advantage of a less per centage of loss; it receives higher rates of interest on its investments, thus making more rapid accumulations—both very important items in Life Insurance; and its expenses have been less in proportion to its business than any other new company doing business in the United States.
